Guidelines for physicians in interactions with industry

See also companion policy Recommendations for physician innovators.

Recommending physicians are encouraged to be knowledgeable about and be a key point of contact for patients regarding a drug before entering into an agreement on provision of a drug, when the drug is provided directly to the patient. Physicians must be transparent in both their professional and personal interactions with pharmaceutical companies and other related entities. Physicians should only be compensated for providing professional services to the patient, such as physician consultation and medical education. Physicians should disclose any financial relationships or potential conflicts of interest to patients and other stakeholders. Physicians should also disclose any potential conflicts of interest to patients or other stakeholders when recommending specific drug therapies.
