A. BACKGROUND

The Department of Health is committed to promoting equal opportunity and to ensuring that all Canadians have equal access to health care. This policy sets out the principles and frameworks that govern the delivery of health care in Canada. The policy is intended to ensure that all Canadians have equal access to health care, regardless of their background or identity.

The policy applies to all health care providers, including physicians and other health care professionals, and to all health care facilities, including hospitals and long-term care facilities. The policy also applies to all research involving human subjects, including clinical trials and epidemiological studies.

The policy is based on the belief that everyone should have equal access to health care, regardless of their background or identity. This includes people who are members of racialized communities, Indigenous peoples, people with disabilities, and people who are lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans, and gender diverse.

The policy is intended to create a culture of respect and inclusivity in all aspects of health care, including in the provision of care, in the development of policies and programs, and in the recruitment and retention of health care professionals.

The policy is intended to promote the health equity of all Canadians and to reduce health disparities among different groups.

The policy is intended to ensure that health care providers are equipped with the knowledge, skills, and resources necessary to provide care that is respectful and inclusive of people's backgrounds and identities.

The policy is intended to ensure that health care providers are accountable for their actions and that they are held to high standards of professional conduct.

The policy is intended to ensure that health care providers are committed to the principles of equity and diversity in all aspects of their work.

Executive Summary

The Canadian Medical Association is pleased to contribute its expertise and experience to the Senate Standing Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology’s examination of Bill C-6, the Protection of Personal Information and Electronic Documents Act. The Association urges the committee to recommend changes to the proposed legislation that would ensure a better balance between privacy and access to personal information.

Bill C-6 proposes to enshrine the right to privacy in legislation. The Association supports this principle, but believes that there is a need for further clarification and definition of key terms such as “personal information” and “personal identifiers.” The Association also recommends that the provisions be explicit about the circumstances in which personal information can be disclosed without the individual’s consent.

The Association is concerned that the bill does not adequately address the issue of access to personal information. The Association suggests that the committee consider adding provisions that would allow individuals to access their personal information and to contest its accuracy.

The Association supports the committee’s recommendation that the legislation include provisions for the enforcement of the Act. However, the Association suggests that the committee consider adding provisions that would allow individuals to challenge the decision of an agency or organization to refuse access to their personal information.

The Association believes that the bill should include provisions that would ensure that the rights of individuals are protected and that the principles of privacy and access to information are balanced.

The Association urges the committee to consider these recommendations in its consideration of Bill C-6.

Comments on Bill C-54
(Personal Information Protection and Electronic Document Act)

Submission to the House of Commons Standing Committee on Industry

March 18, 1999

Can the Information Commissioner adequately enforce the intent of Bill C-54?

The policy concerns that are raised in this submission are directed to the possible adverse impact that Bill C-54 may have on the quality of patient care, the relationship between the health care provider and the patient, and the ultimate goal of creating a health care system that is more responsive to patients and their families.

In addition, some of the comments are directed toward the ethical obligations of health care providers in caring for patients in crisis situations. The submission urges that the broader debate on health care issues be conducted in an atmosphere of respect for all concerned.
